Sir Cliff Richard: BBC pays £2m in final settlement after privacy case

4 September 2019

REUTERS

| Sir Cliff said news coverage of a police raid on his house was "devastating"

Sir Cliff Richard will receive around £2m towards his legal costs from the BBC after agreeing a final settlement following last year's privacy case.

In July 2018, the star won a High Court case against the broadcaster over its coverage of a police raid on his home.

The BBC was ordered to pay £210,000 in damages, and later agreed to pay £850,000 to cover legal costs. That figure has now increased.

The image is a screenshot of a Sky News website article. At the top left is the 'sky news' logo. To the right of the logo, it shows the date '27 Apr', a weather icon, and the temperature '14°' with a high/low of '10°'. There is a 'Watch Live' button in the top right corner. Below the logo and weather information is a navigation menu with links for 'Home', 'UK', 'Coronation', 'World', 'Politics', 'US', 'Climate', 'Science & Tech', 'Business', 'Ents & Arts', 'Travel', and 'More'. The main headline of the article is 'Gareth Thomas says tabloid 'forced' him to reveal HIV status'. Below the headline is a sub-headline: 'The rugby star says "everybody" can guess which newspaper blackmailed him after a reporter turned up outside his parents' house.' The author is listed as 'By Lucia Binding, news reporter'. The date and time of publication are 'Wednesday 18 September 2019 17:16, UK'. At the bottom of the article is a large photograph of Gareth Thomas, a bald man with a serious expression, looking slightly to the left. He is wearing a dark jacket over a red shirt.

Sky News team's harrowing account of their violent ambush in Ukraine this week

On Monday, near Kyiv, chief correspondent Stuart Ramsay and his team were attacked. Camera operator Richie Mockler took two rounds to his body armour, Stuart was wounded. Their experience illustrates the scale of the mayhem and violence as Russia's invasion enters a new and deadlier phase.
